

Thank you!!!!

Our youngest, Jamie, is 5 this year!

We're so grateful to all our supporters who make it possible for us to serve here in Cambodia. It's been another great year at Logos International School. I've taught a Christian philosophy and apologetics class four years running and each year the class seems to offer some pretty cool spiritual highlights. This year I have had the opportunity to witness a few students come to recognize the veracity of the Christian claims and express a desire to learn more about Jesus. I pray for these students that as they graduate and move onto university, they will experience God work in their lives and give Him the ascendancy in their lives that He deserves. I know you're praying with me!

Next school year, I have the opportunity to be the school chaplain. This role will be combined with my school counseling role and in addition, I will lead our school's weekly chapel services, Bible camp, and service trip. I will have the chance to really preach the gospel and minister to students as they seek truth.

As missionaries teaching and ministering through an international school environment, our ministry is quite strategic. Logos continues to attract Cambodian students from varying socioeconomic situations. We have many Cambodian students who are children of very influential families and are guaranteed positions of significant influence upon completion of tertiary studies. Seeing these youth's lives transformed by the gospel and knowing that they will be seeking Christ as they lead commerce and government in this country is exciting. I look forward to sharing some stories with those we have a chance to meet with this summer.

We'll be getting around the US this summer and will try to meet with as many supporters as possible. A big "Aloha" goes out to our Hawaii ohana who has supported us so faithfully these 8.5 years. We sure wish we could see you this summer, but I know you understand that being in the middle of the Pacific makes it a bit too challenging for our rental van to reach you. :)
